Alumni Speak

Thank you to the team at Varthamanjari for inviting me to share my memories from my time at Sir MVIT. Similar to most alumni, my memories at Sir MVIT include the drafter and khaki uniform, the labs, the green campus, the guava and pineapple seller under the tree, the coffee shop (I hope it's still there), the hostel life, the long bus-rides, the cultural fests and of course, the cherished friendships. What made my experience at MVIT unique was not just these experiences. It was the dedicated professors and mentors that I found there. They tried to get the concepts across as much, if not more, than the students themselves. I want to dedicate this note to them and convey my heartfelt appreciation. All said, it is about you, the readers and your journey. So, I want to leave you with three thoughts. One, know your roots, culture, and identity before you branch out too far to grab onto far-fetched things. It will make you grounded, confident and proud. Second, in these times of global information overload, find some time to look within and reflect. And finally, please find and pursue your passion and your values, not those of people around you. It is going to make your professional life meaningful and satisfactory. wish you all the very best in your exciting-journeys! -Ms.Anshu Shroff
